Though it weighs 37 tons, the giant craft, powered by 12 500-horsepower motors, cleared the water in 28 seconds. The plane is three-decked, 30 feet long and 33 feet high, with a wingspread of 160 feet.

Keith's Jewelry Store Is Robbed

Thief Escapes With Loot Valued At $500 In Watches and Jewelry

Introducing big-time methods into this city and staging something new to residents, thieves last night rifled the show window at Keith's jewelry store, on Second between Main and Elm, escaping with about five hundred dollars in watches and jewelry.

The thief—officers believe there was only one doing the work—used a glass-cutter to mark out a half circle at the lower corner of the window. Then with a stone wrapped in a cloth he struck the glass a sharp blow, knocking out the portion he had marked with the cutter. The jewelry display in the window was within easy reach and in short order the window denuded of its contents.

Night officers discovered the theft at about two o'clock this morning and notified Mr. Keith. A check-up reveals most of the loot was watches and chains and bands, though a number of purses and mesh bags are also gone.

Three years ago Chief Baker, then on the night force, caught a burglar in the store, nabbing him as he was leaving with 14 watches in his pockets. The place has been undisturbed since then until last night.

No burglary insurance is carried on the stock.

Moscow Says Not To Declare War

Acting Government Head In Statements Says Will Observe Pact.

MOSCOW, Russia, July 19.—(AP)—The acting head of the Soviet government told American newspaper men today that Russia had no intention of declaring war on China over the Manchurian situation.

The speaker cited the Kellogg Peace pact, to which Russia is a signatory power and said that it was the purpose of the government to adhere to that pact, believing it worth far more than the few millions involved in the Manchurian-Siberian border trouble.

Family Held On A Liquor Charge

Constable Claims Women Broke Up Cargo of Corn While Fleeing.

PINE BLUFF, July 19.—(AP)—A 60-year-old woman, three of her children and her daughter-in-law were arrested today charged with transporting liquor. The five, Mrs. Ella Long, mother, Lester, Dec and wife and Willie, were taken into custody after a chase in which the officers said the party had broken many containers holding whiskey. Constable J. L. McBurnett, who made the arrests, said when he overhauled the fleeing car the running board was covered with fragments of fruit jars and wet with whiskey.

McBurnett said he had received information that the Longs planned to carry a large amount of liquor to the Confederate reunion at Star City today and was on the watch for them.

All five were released under bond and will be given a preliminary hearing tomorrow.

Hempstead Flock Takes First Again

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Cobb Rank High In June Demonstration.

A Hempstead county poultry flock takes first place in the state demonstrations for June, according to a report made public today by G. W. Knox, Jr., poultry specialist at the University of Arkansas.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis A. Cobb, with their English white Leghorns topped every other flock in the state for the month with an average of 23 eggs per hen in their flock of 70 for the month.

J. M. Hendrix is another poultry fancier in the county making an excellent record, his flock of Leghorns falling but a few points under the Cobb mark. In the Cobb flock the average number of hens was 70 and a total egg production of 1610.

Average selling price of eggs through the month in the state was 25.8. Of flocks reporting, 75 in number, they received 150,322 eggs or an average per hen of 15.5.

Tennessee Laws Are Constitutional

Court Settles Squabble and State Funds Are Released.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., July 19.—(AP)—The Hall income tax act and the general appropriation bill were declared valid and constitutional by the supreme court today.

The chancery court had held the tax law invalid because it was a tax on stocks and bonds not taxed ad valorem. The supreme court reversed that ruling and held that the tax was not a double tax.

The general appropriation bill, backbone of the state, had been attacked by Nonth Cooper, a tax payer, who contended the measure was unconstitutional because the governor had signed it on Sunday.

The chancery court ruled against this contention and the ruling was sustained by the higher court.

Boy Scouts and Band Boys Saenger Guests

Saenger theatre will be host tonight to members of Hope Boy's Band and Boy Scouts, it is announced by Manager Eaves. And they won't be bothered with a lot of red tape, either. Just tell the young lady at the window what you are and see a good show.

Jack Eaves, Saenger manager, is something of an enthusiast over Boy Scout work and nearly as foolish as George Robinson over this Boys Band and takes this opportunity to show the youngsters he's for them.

Then he made the gang in this temple of truth and democracy a present of a group of cantaloupes, all ready for the eating except a little salt and pepper. They were larrupin', Mr. Bennett—and if the advertising or mechanical department of this office swipes the slice we're saving somebody's going to get kilt.

Negroes Confess Slaying of Katz In Camden Woods

Man Admits Crime When Told By Wife She Had Confessed.

HELD WITHOUT BAIL

Woman Lured White Man Into Thicket Where He Was Killed.

CAMDEN, July 19.—(AP)—Brought face to face with his wife, who confessed last night, Ambrose Alford, negro, broke down and admitted that he and his wife killed Sam Katz.

CAMDEN, Ark., July 19.—Gladys Alford, negro, 19, confessed to county officers here Thursday night that her husband, Ambrosia, killed Sam Katz, Russian cobbler, following an argument in a pine grove near here last Monday night. The shooting, she told officers, occurred as she turned to run from the scene.

The body of Katz was not found until Tuesday afternoon. The negro girl and her husband were arrested Wednesday morning.

The confession was made after a 12-hour questioning by Sheriff A. W. Ellis and Deputy Prosecuting Attorney T. M. Clifford.

Following a short fight, she ran a few steps from the scene of the conflict, she told the officers. She then heard several shots. She ran home.

Soon her husband arrived, with blood on his overalls, she added. The negro man at once was grilled by the officers. Late Thursday night he had made no statement.

Six charred bodies have been found in the ruins of the buildings destroyed and it is feared the death list will grow higher. The fire burned eight hours before being brought under control.

Liquor Sellers In Federal Court

Prohi Leader Declares War On Women Violators of Law.

TEXARKANA, July 19.—The Arkansas federal courtroom had that "feminine touch" Thursday as the last of preliminary hearings were set for 14 women arrested on liquor charges in Miller county Wednesday.

Similar settings for seven men also picked up in the federal raids on bootlegging complaints worked up over a period of two months by undercover agents were overshadowed by attention given the fairer sex.

Judging from widespread interest in the raids, the Arkansas administrators are among the first in the country to take advantage of federal penal facilities for women recently provided. According to S. M. Gurley, who succeeded George Bausewein as deputy prohibition administrator for the western district of Arkansas May 1, the drive was only a starter for proceedings yet to come against alleged female bootleggers in this section. Gurley returned to Fort Smith Wednesday night.

Four women and a man were allowed temporary bond Wednesday, 10 women were brought before United States Commissioner J. Warren Stevens Thursday morning and the male prisoners appeared Thursday afternoon.

Farm Board Asked To Study Cotton

Texas Senator Urge Body To Study Cotton Situation.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—(AP)—Senator Connally, of Texas, today appealed to the federal farm board to give early consideration to the cotton situation.

The Texas senator asked that the board establish a bureau of statistics as the first step to point the way to a study of cotton conditions. Carl Williams, Oklahoma, cotton representative on the board, expressed interest in the suggestion of a statistical bureau and said the board, when its formal policy had been determined, would take action.

Supreme Test for Kellogg Treaty

Arkansas Senator Says Far East Trouble Is Test.

STAR CITY, July 19.—(AP)—The Russian-Chinese trouble is the supreme test of the Kellogg-Briand pact to prevent war, the test coming almost before the signatures of the approving nations had dried, Senator Joe T. Robinson declared in an address here today to Confederate veterans at their annual county reunion.

The senator declared that the break in diplomatic relations between Russia and China, both signatories of the pact outlawing war, imperiled the peace of the world and that if the treaty prevented hostilities between the nations, it would have earned its place among nations.

Trouble Follows Strike Discussion

New Orleans Official Whips Son of Mayor, Is Thrown Out of Office.

NEW ORLEANS, July 19.—(AP)—Angus Williams, recorder of mortgages in New Orleans, today beat up and threw out of his office Arthur O'Keefe, son of the mayor, when the young man called at his office to demand an apology for language Williams had used toward the mayor in an open air strike meeting last night.

Young O'Keefe was not seriously hurt though somewhat bruised and battered when picked up and carried to his father's office.

Employees of a Pennsylvania tin plate mill are pledged to exercise care to prevent accidents, and raise their right hands twice daily as a reminder.

The Mexican government recently requested the embargo be lifted, and a statement by the state department in which the embargo was declared raised pointed out that Mexico had recently withstood severe internal strife and the existence of the embargo was no longer necessary.

Melons Bringing Excellent Price for New Season

First Cantaloupes Out Thursday—15 Cars Watermelons.

QUALITY VERY HIGH

Famous Hempstead Melons On Market A Week Early.

BULLETIN

At noon today, according to reports, the current market price for watermelons jumped from $1.05 to $1.25 per hundred, with prospects of going still higher. Competitive buying for eastern markets is given as the cause for the price hike.

The first car of 1929 cantaloupes was shipped from Hope Thursday and the movement of watermelons was fairly under way with ten cars cleared and a total of fifteen expected by Friday night.

Prices are ranging extraordinarily high for both crops, with watermelons pronounced by visiting buyers as the "smoothest and best in years." Kansas City and Chicago buyers are in the field, together with the four local commission houses, and the price on watermelons has advanced from 92 cents per hundred to $1.05 according to reports to The Star.

The watermelon crop is early, but cantaloupes are running late. The latter crop will reach 15 to 20 cars this year, however; and total shipments of watermelons will go into several hundred cars. The first car of watermelons last year left Hope July 23, while the present season started July 16.

Watermelon cars are running from 32,000 pounds to 40,000, with the commission houses reporting more 40,000 pounders than anything else. The melons themselves are ranging around 38 and 40 pounds, of the finest quality. They are catching the early market at peak prices.

The outgoing truck crops are reflected in heavy movements of perishable freight from the local railroad yards, where two switch engines are busy 24 hours every day.

Bogard's Church Adopts New Rules

Violation By Church Officer Means Automatically Fired.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 19.—(AP)—Dancing, mixed bathing and card playing have been officially banned among officers of the Antioch Missionary Baptist church of Little Rock.

A Sunday school teacher and a leader in the young peoples training course already have vacated their offices as a result of disapproval of a resolution which automatically removes any officer of the church who violates its provisions. The Rev. Ben M. Bogard, president of the American Anti-Evolution Association, is pastor of the church.

The resolution, adopted at a business meeting of the church members, expresses opposition "to the dance, both private and public, to public mixed bathing and also card playing." The violation of this act will "automatically remove from office in the church any official member," says the resolution.

Back From Jaunt To West Coast and Places

State Pride

"WE hope, with the assistance of the state press, to create such a pride in Arkansas that its people, wherever they may be, will become missionaries for the state."—Excerpt from a letter to The Editor, from the Arkansas State Chamber of Commerce.

No finer statement of the aims and objects of a patriotic society of the commonwealth, could possibly be made. There is a morale in politics, business and society that is invaluable to the good name and material wealth of the home state.

Just as a successful private business sets up a considerable item in its assets as "good will," so a state for the fullest prosperity depends upon the loyalty and enterprise of each individual citizen. If the State Chamber of Commerce can recapture more of man's inherent loyalty to his homeland, and whip it into actual accomplishment—then the State Chamber will be the marvel of the age in Arkansas.

As one not born in Arkansas we might write that we never have seen a land more full of opportunity. Nor have we known of any settlers who, once coming here, have ever left again through the fault of Arkansas.

There has been a marked revival in state pride in recent years. It is bound to continue to grow, we believe, because it is the habit of outsiders newly arrived to outshout the natives. The ballyhoo in California and Florida was raised by immigrants, and the arrival of newcomers in Texas took nothing away from the insufferable pride of your native long horn.

Whatever the State Chamber can do toward rallying Arkansas around one slogan, one emblem, one idea, will be all to the good. This state has a magnificent tradition, a beautiful territory, and the inexhaustible courage born of human experience in war and peace.

If there were one thing to be suggested to the State Chamber it is, that we return to the original title of Arkansas. This used to be known as the Bear State, we are informed, until the legislature, in a poorly enthusiastic moment, changed it to Wonder State. That last is horrible.

California's title of the Golden Bear is attractive. Arkansas' original Bear State designation is equally vivid and interesting. It is original, smells of the hunt, and has hair on its chest—the logical son of pioneer American fathers.

The chamber of commerce fabrication, Wonder State, is a pain in the neck, and we suggest that the State Chamber drop it. We've been suggesting that for six years and in 1929 we'd like to see some action.

Believe It Or Not

GOURD vines are growing rapidly in the South this year, according to a recent press dispatch from Lochanoka, Ala., and as a result A. H. Nunn, a farmer of that community, had a turkey dinner considerably ahead of the usual season.

Nunn declares that one of his young turkeys went to roost on a gourd vine and that the vine's tendrils grew around the bird's neck during the night, so that when it tried to fly to the ground next morning it was held by the twining shoots and strangled to death.

Mr. Nunn is reputed to be a truthful man, and as the tale concerns his own turkey there appears to be no valid reason to doubt his veracity. Anyway, this is his story. Believe it or not.

Big Poultry Pool

CANADIAN farmers have long been going in for cooperative marketing on a large scale, with apparently satisfactory results. Recently a combination of four provincial poultry marketing organizations has been formed, which will control a larger output, perhaps, than has ever been brought under management.

The Canadian Poultry Pool, Limited, will embrace the former cooperative marketing organizations of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, and will now handle and sell the poultry and egg production of all four provinces under one control.

It is expected to give further stabilization to poultry prices in the territory concerned, and its operation will be observed with interest by similar organizations elsewhere.

They're Red Hot! R-R-Red Hot!

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington—The problem of what to do with our ex-presidents may remain baffling and poignant, but the ex-secretaries of presidents are never in any doubt concerning their futures after they leave the White House.

Comfortable law offices and fat fees await them in Washington, where hundreds of lawyers get along wonderfully well without ever practicing any law at all. Only a distinct minority of the thousands of occupants of "law offices" here ever bother with court cases.

Many of the others are commonly regarded as lobbyist or "fixers," who exert their talents and personal influence on Congress and the government departments on behalf of prosperous clients.

The several presidential ex-secretaries now doing business here have all practiced law in their time and are not unwilling to go into the courts, but they have joined the large, happy family of ex-cabinet members, ex-senators, ex-congressmen and other ex-government officials whose property here has been largely dependent on a widespread belief that they are specially qualified to wangle things out of the government.

Very rarely is it specifically charged that one of these gents has used official contacts improperly. It is probably quite natural that they are best known and where their most favorable opportunities appear to lie—that's not unethical. In doing so, doubtless no unworthy thought ever enters their heads.

But it is only natural that they are promptly sought out when outside interests go after legislative or administrative favors. Little or no such business. These boys know the ropes. They know the people to see. And in the cases of ex-members of Congress they have the precious privilege of the floor.

Of course there is no sense in going out and calling people lobbyists unless everyone is agreed as to just what a lobbyist is. The dictionary says a lobbyist is one who solicits legislators for votes. It is hard to draw a line between lobbyists and "fixers," who seek to influence officials, as in tax cases. Many do both.

If a lobbyist is one who seeks tariff favors for special interests, then at least two presidential ex-secretaries qualify.

C. Bascom Sloop, former secretary to President Coolidge, has been representing firms interested in metal schedules. Sloop and his law partner have frequently been concerned in big money cases here in which the government had some sort of an interest, including alien property matters, the fight against the inheritance tax and Muscle Shoals. Very recently a Capt. Barlow, after unsatisfactory experience with the State Department in his attempts to collect some hundreds of thousands of dollars of which the Cubans are supposed to have robbed him, employed Sloop and Everett Sanders, another Coolidge secretary.

Sanders entered the Washington office of the law firm of Secretary of War Jim Good, which specializes in income tax cases and has represented the Alabama Power Co. Lately Sanders has represented the plate glass interests which want a tariff increase.

Ted Clark, Coolidge's erstwhile private secretary, has installed himself in one of the big new office buildings and is now said to represent the Liggett drug interests.

KIPLING MIGHT HAVE WRITTEN

THIS TO ARKANSAS

Rudyard Kipling, perhaps the best known English poet alive today, penned these lines some years ago:

"It ain't the guns nor armament, nor the funds that they can pay, But close co-operation that makes 'em win the day."

It ain't the individual, nor the army as a whole, But the everlastin' team work of every bloomin' soul."

While expressed in military terms, the sound advice of this far-sighted thinker is equally adapted for the peace-time pursuit of our people. For great businesses, great movements, great empires are alike built on a healthful appreciation of HOME institutions and "the everlastin' team work of every bloomin' soul."

"Nothing but the Truth" is a 100 percent talking production with no silent version. It is a veritable laugh-factory, turning out two giggles and one guffaw per second. It is the first all-talking farce Paramount has yet produced to satisfy a farce-hungry public, and it sets a high mark for succeeding farces to shoot at. A dyspeptic pessimist could see and hear it and leave the theatre a chuckling optimist.

Richard Dix does things in this that you never saw him do before. He pulls surprise after surprise with his artful pantomime, and definitely joins the ranks of the masters of meaningful gestures. In addition, he speaks with a fine, vibrant voice, light enough to be vibrant and just rich enough to stay out of the "heavy" class. It is his first appearance in talking pictures.

The SHINING TALENT

By ELEANOR EARLY © 1929 BY NEA Service Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

A tragedy has befallen Molly Burnham and Jack Wells who love each other devotedly and guard beyond all reason. Jack has bought his sweetheart an engagement ring, and because Molly seems hesitant about wearing it to work the next morning he imagines that she is ashamed of the size of the tiny diamond. Humiliated and heart-broken, he drops the little shining stone into the lake, where they are rowing.

Next morning Jack is going to New York to work in the home office of a large architectural firm. And Molly is to report for the first time to a newspaper office, where the city editor has promised her a tryout.

Molly has recently inherited $10,000, of which Jack refuses to borrow a penny. They will be married as soon as he has enough money of his own. Molly goes with him to his room, to help him pack, and then goes to the Y. M. C. A., where she has taken a room. A few days later her father sends her a check and she determines to find new and more luxurious quarters.

And so—discouraged by her sweetheart and her parents—she begins to live her own life, and to seek expression for her seething soul. She gets work in a newspaper and becomes, very shortly, a special writer. Her biggest thrill comes when she is assigned to cover a murder trial.

Now Go On With the Story

CHAPTER IX

It was a celebrated trial, to which many out-of-town papers sent their star reporters. One New York paper had three men and a sob sister there. Even the society reporter showed up, which was most unusual, as society reporters are customarily wed to respectability. But then this was most unusual trial.

The defendant was an artist.

called him, a "society artist," the papers called him, which meant that he had a very fashionable following. He was a handsome man and the petted darling of many smart women.

Although Lionel Barrows seemed an esthetic type, he had engaged in a love affair that had, apparently, no esthetic side. The women were beautiful and infamous. And now she was dead. Barrows was charged with her murder.

There had been a lengthy investigation, during which many men were questioned. For some time Barrows' name had been kept out of it. His aunt was a very wealthy dowager, and socially prominent. And he had friends among the most influential people in the city.

But the district attorney's office it developed, had his eagle eye the while on the slim, handsome artist. And one day Barrows, without so much as preliminary questioning, was placed summarily under arrest.

"How," asked the city editor one Saturday night, "how would you like, Miss Burnham, to cover a murder trial?"

"Don't kid me," she besought him, "that's cruelty to girls."

"But I mean it," he grinned.

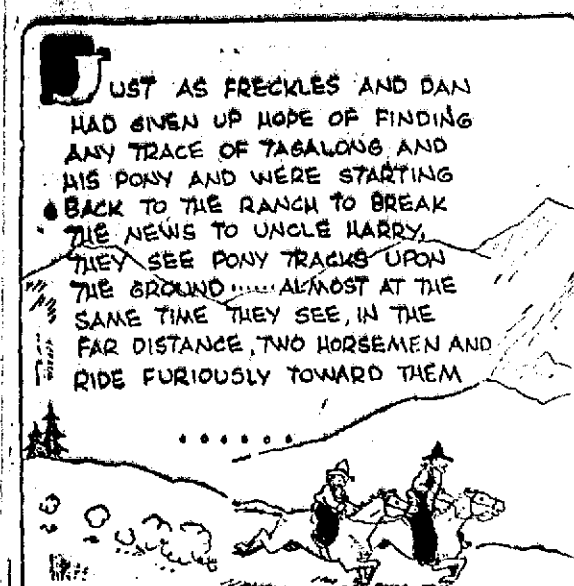

"This Barrows case—Charlie Ryan will file a running story, and we're sending Slim along for high lights. But there's a lot of women stuff that Slim isn't going to get. It'll be meat for you. All those society dames, agitating their little Boy Blue. And Boy Blue on trial for the meanest murder on record."

"You don't mean . . ." Molly gasped, breathless.

"Sure I mean it," insisted the city editor. "Why not? you can do it, can't you?"

"Oh, I can. I know I can, Mr. Wharton! I'd love to. It's just wonderful of you to let me. It's

WE OUGHT TO BE CLOSER TO THEM NOW— LET'S STOP AND SEE IF WE CAN GET A BETTER LOOK AT THEM!

—oh, it's perfectly glorious."

Wharton grinned amiably. "It takes a story like this to give you girls the breaks," he observed. "But don't put the books in Barrows, Molly. I don't believe they've the goods on him. Guilty as the devil and all that. But he has a good chance of getting off. We can't convict a man in the newspapers you know."

"Oh, I'll be careful!" she promised.

"Well, lay off Barrows," he admonished.

That night Molly stayed at the office until dawn, reading hundreds of clippings that told of the murder of Bernice Bradford, ex-artist's model, who lived and died in florid splendor in the most exclusive residential section of the city.

Bernice was not a good girl. But she had been a rarely beautiful one. Girlhood photographs, supplied by her heart-broken mother, proved that. She had been a slim, white thing, with a crimson mouth. And golden hair, and little, twining hands.

Many men had valued her charms sufficiently to pay bills that were many and varied. Bernice had driven an expensive car, and kept an expensive maid, had worn beautiful clothes, and lived in a costly apartment.

The medical examiner said he had never seen a woman so perfect in death. Her hair framed her white face like a cloud of golden glory, and she looked, in her coffin, more like a saint than a sinner.

But for all her still and lovely look, Bernice Bradford had died a dreadful death. She had been poisoned.

Barrows' lawyers would contend it might have been suicide. Neither side was prepared to explain the mystery of the wedding gown that hung in Bernice's closet. The State would naturally declare that a woman anticipating marriage would hardly commit suicide. The defense, on the other hand, was ready to allege that the girl might have met her death at the hands of an unknown slayer—the man whom she expected to marry. Barrows, being married, would be eliminated from that assumption of the case.

Molly went to the reference room (the morgue, they called it, in newspaper parlance) and studied pictures of Bernice and the artist. The girl was lovely in a wild flower sort of way. Tempestuous, with daring eyes, and willful lips, and a mad smile.

Lionel Barrows had a narrow mouth, and a thin face. His forehead was high, and he wore his hair rather long, in the fashion of a poet. He had the wide eyes of a dreamer, and a beautiful Roman nose. It was impossible Molly thought, to imagine him committing murder.

"After all," she reflected, "you never can tell."

And that night she made many observations in her notebook. A story was shaping itself in her mind. The story of a woman who died for love. In imagination Molly could create the woman. And the man worth dying for would be a man like Jack. She could fashion the characters, she knew. Perhaps the trial of Barrows would furnish the plot.

On Sunday, cleaning out her dressing table drawer, Molly came upon the little verse she had torn from a newspaper the day she was graduated from college. It was some time since she had seen it, and she read it aloud:

"A girl she had her hope and chance— But Fate was thwarted by a glance. A look that set her heart afire, So genius died, for warm desire.

Yet still the phantom visions glow, Although a world will never know The Shining Talent that was dead. So soon as that bright soul was wed.

A dull and stodgy wife is she,

And dark the flame that used to be,

But always come to torture her The dreams of things that never were.

So this is the song of the wife— Ah, what have I done with my life?"

Later, as she was hurrying to the corner for a jar of cream for coffee, she met a messenger with a special delivery for her. Jack put a special stamp on his Saturday letters, so she might always hear from him on Sundays. There were some boys coming out from the office for Welsh rarebit that night, and Molly thrust the letter in her bag. She would open it later. It was so nice to read Jack's letters leisurely. He wrote the sweetest letters in the world, she thought.

Conversation that evening revolved about the Barrows trial. The crowd congratulated Molly so warmly that she began to feel as if she had already arrived.

"Atta girl," approved Slim Boynton. "You're the best darn newspaper woman in the city, and I'll bet you haven't cut your wisdom teeth yet. Don't go and get married now, Molly, and cramp your style."

Red Flynn elaborated. "Say, we had a kid in the office once—wonderful little kid. What a future that kid might have had! And what do you think she did? Went and married a filing clerk! Nobody's heard a peep out of her since."

Molly laughed. "Look, boys!" she cried, and showed them the little, torn clipping. "This is my battery. My hymn of freedom." "Well, I'll be darned!" Slim gave a long amazed whistle. "Who do you suppose wrote that thing? Helen What's-Her-Name—you know—the girl that married Roger Wells. She was on the old Record. Smart kid, too. She went to go on with the writing after she was married. She and Roger were going to collaborate on a novel. Ambitious girl—Helen."

"I hadn't seen her for years, until one day I bumped into Roger in the subway. He's editor now of some jerk sheet. And he dragged me out for dinner. Helen was a good deal of a wreck. She looked about 10 years older than Roger. Thin as a rail. They'd had a few kids. Cute little things, with red hair. After dinner, Roger had to go down to the office, and Helen gave me an ear full. A regular spiel about dead ambition, thwarted dreams, and all that. She showed me that verse. Said she'd written right out of her bleeding heart."

Red nodded sympathetically. "Marriage raises the devil with some women. Better watch your step, Molly."

"Oh I intend to," she assured them.

And after they had gone, she opened Jack's letter. He had had a raise. . . . "And, oh Molly darling, I want you so, little girl. I wonder if marriage means as much to you as it does to me. I wonder if you long for me as I long for you. Tell me, Sweetheart, do you dream day and

Is a Swell Fellow

Walter Johnson, when he was in the spring training camp of the Washington Senators in Tampa said he was not going to be hard with his athletes.

He also expressed a few opinions on the effect of golf on ball players.

"Golf doesn't hurt a ball player as long as he doesn't play 18 holes in the morning and arrive at the ball park all tired and full of sweat. They can play golf on their off days. We have some very fine golfers on this club and I don't want to deprive them of their pleasure. It's better to be out in the open than in a speak-easy."

Walter Johnson is that kind of a fellow. Always giving the other fellow a break. And that's the reason a lot of baseball men think he never will be a successful manager.

But He Gets Mad

But, according to reports, Johnson is becoming hard. Just a few days ago one of his pitchers, Braxton, was knocked out of the box with the maximum speed that could be imposed by the opposition. And Muddy Ruel, the first string catcher, had one of his worst days.

Johnson learned that on the day previous, an off day, Braxton and Ruel had played 36 holes of golf under a broiling sun and that the two of them were sun burnt and worn out when they reported for work the next day.

Whew, What a Fine!

And then Sir Walter, the big boss, issued an order:

"Five hundred dollars fine for the next man on this ball club who plays golf before the club has played its last game."

Yep, He's the Boy Wonder!

Melvin Ott, the Giant child, who has been leading the sluggers of the major leagues with home runs, has won a big gallery at the Polo Grounds and around the National League circuit. Among them are some fair fans, as is indicated in

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

There is a box in the Cleveland ball park numbered 301-A. And it is the personal box of Walter McNichols, secretary of the club. And it is supposed to be a jinx box—Bill Evans, business manager of the club, would not sit in it on a bet. And McNichols will use one of the chairs only when the team is way ahead. And if things begin to look bad he ducks out. And a newspaperman with a femme was sitting in the box recently and the Indians were taking a thumping. And McNichols came down and ordered them out of the box. And as soon as they left the Indians got seven successive hits. And won the ball game.

the following piece from Joe Vili, veteran New York sports editor:

"Melvin Ott, the Giants' infant prodigy, who is leading the National League in home run hitting, figured in a funny incident at the Polo Grounds the other day. A woman roofer, who sits daily in the front row of the right field stands and loudly encourages the Giants, stood up as Ott came to the bat and shouted at the top of her voice:

"Here's Melvin Ott, the boy wonder! Now, baby, hit one right into my hands!"

He Obeyed Orders

"She reached over the end of the stands and cupped her hands ready to make the catch. By a queer twist of fate, Ott lined the ball like a cannon shot straight at her hands.

"She ducked but threw up her hands in time to deflect the ball back into the stands, whereupon Ott galloped around the bases for his twenty-first homer.

"You can't beat that one."

Boxers Stage Real Scrap for Right To Meet Matlock.

Tex Leavelle last night at the end of ten rounds of furious mixing, was given the judges' decision over Jack Ashton, the Vicksburg, Miss., heavy who came up to try his luck in Arkansas. It had been announced that the winner of last night's fight would be carded with Matlock for August 8, Festival Day scrap and from the way the fight went over last night both men want a crack at the big fellow before a Festival crowd.

The main event was good—it had to be to keep the crowd from being sadly disappointed. The Jimmie Carter-Johnnie Celmas match had been discussed as the main event and Carter failing to put in an appearance didn't please the fans any too well. Neither did the curtailing of the "Preacher" Walker—"Kid Shimmy" bout which had been advertised for six but was called at five rounds and would go no further.

No Shortage of Labor In Country

Sufficient Supply to Meet Requirements Is Available.

WASHINGTON, July 19.—(AP)—Sufficient supply of farm labor to meet requirements in practically all sections of the country was indicated today in a report of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Although the supply is somewhat smaller than on July 1 of last year, due to increased volume of industrial employment, the supply as a percentage of demand was reported at 101.7 per cent whereas a year ago at this time it was 105.5 per cent.

Farm wages also were reported by the bureau to be slightly higher than a year ago, being 173 expressed as an index number, compared with 175 last July, the 1910-1914 average being used as a base of 100. Wage increases over July, 1928, were general throughout the country except in the South Atlantic states where rates are slightly lower.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 19.—

(AP)—Although there was an increase in the volume of employment on outdoor activities, there was a surplus of unskilled labor in the larger cities of Arkansas during June, according to analysis of the labor situation in the labor situation in the state covering that period, which was announced today by the Employment service of the U. S. Department of Labor.

Some part time work was reported in the various coal mines of the state, the report said, and a surplus of coal miners existed. A number of the lumber mills in Arkansas worked on part-time schedules and curtailed their forces, resulting in a surplus of lumber mill labor.

While a majority of the textile mills operated on full-time schedules, there was a small decrease in employment and a surplus of these workers was reported, the report said. The iron and steel working plants and several other miscellaneous industries increased their forces. Substantial building programs were under way in the larger cities and resident building mechanics were fairly well employed.

There was an increase in the demand for labor for road construction with an ample supply available. Sufficient farm help for all demands existed.

Old English Dances Were Warm Numbers

LONDON, June 14.—There were perils in dancing the good old polka in the balmy 88's, it would seem from a dance program seen recently in a book-seller's window.

On the back of the program the gentlemen were asked to refrain from smoking because it "irritated the musicians" and in heavy type was the following admonition: "Gentlemen must not whirl their ladies, for a fluttering skirt and legs is not honorable to the company."

Defying an ancient superstition, Miss Ursula Spencer of London wore a green gown at her wedding.

Conway Saved By Municipal Plant

CONWAY, July 19.—Several years ago the citizens of this little city were in need of electricity for lighting and power purposes and, as was the custom in many places at that time, proceeded to organize and install a municipal power plant.

Today that same power plant, enlarged and improved as the years went by and necessity demanded, is proving to be the salvation of Conway's greatest assets and, literally, of the community itself.

Conway is not a great industrial center as are some other communities. It has quite a large area of trade territory, but that alone would not be sufficient to produce the big volume of business enjoyed by the merchants and other business establishments of this city of approximately 7,000 population. Conway's outstanding asset, the thing which makes the city stand out as one of the leading communities of the state, is the herds of young men and young women who come here yearly from Arkansas and neighboring states to take opportunities offered by the colleges which have caused this city to be termed the "Athens of Arkansas."

Nearly Lost Colleges

A few months ago Conway was in serious danger of losing its colleges.

There was a movement by the state Methodist board to consolidate Hendrix college of this city with Henderson-Brown College of Arkadelphia and to establish the consolidated school at some point which would offer financial inducements regarded as best.

In that movement residents of Conway saw the doom of their city. Little Rock, centrally located from every standpoint—geography, transportation, etc.—wanted the consolidated college and the chamber of commerce of the Capital City was pledged to raise an endowment so large that its magnitude appeared insurmountable to the people of this community, whose wealth was small when compared to that of Little Rock. In addition to the offer of the Little Rock Chamber of Commerce, two outstanding citizens of Arkansas two of the most wealthy men of the state and active leaders, offered to add materially to the endowment of the proposed college, provided it was established at Little Rock.

Situation Serious

The State Methodist board, appointed by the two church conferences of the state for the purpose of working out the details of the consolidation, were reported as favoring acceptance of the Little Rock proposition. Pleas made by representatives of Conway at board meetings apparently were unavailing, even when based on a contract between residents of Conway and representatives of the church back in the days when Hendrix was established.

It was finally decided that in one way—and in one way only—could Conway hope to retain Hendrix College: residents of the city must raise an endowment of several hundred thousand dollars or the college would be moved to Little Rock.

And how were they to do it? To dig down in their pockets and donate such a large amount of money would almost bankrupt the little city. How could Conway with a population less than one-tenth of that of Little Rock hope to bid successfully for the new consolidated institution?

Others Needed Aid

Nor was the loss of Hendrix college the only threat against the city.

Central College, a girl's school, operated by the Baptists church was also on the verge of being moved. This institution during several years past had been barely able to function and the board of trustees advised that unless financial aid was forthcoming from some place the institution would be closed.

The Arkansas State Teachers' College, also located here, needed help as well. The institution was unable to obtain a grade A rating because of the lack of a library building which met the requirements of the association. Efforts to get the state legislature to provide the $50,000 necessary to establish the library, were futile and it appeared that the people of Conway would be compelled to solve the problems in order to save the colleges.

To add to the serious aspect of the situation, the state had just provided for taking over the property of the abandoned Henderson-Brown College at Arkadelphia and the legislature act taking over the property called for the maintenance of a grade A teachers college. With a recognized state teachers college at Arkadelphia, the unrecognized institution at Conway was threatened with a big loss in students.

The Light Pinat

The very life of Conway was at stake. All three of its colleges were threatened.

A mass meeting of citizens was held to work out a plan of action. At that meeting a committee was appointed with instructions to make recommendations of a course which would save the situation.

As plan after plan was studied and discarded as inadequate discouragement grew until a member of the committee thought of the municipal power plant. That plant was a revenue producer. It belonged to the People of Conway and in what better way could it serve its owners than by contributing to a fund to save the city? Loss of the educational institutions would mean also; loss of revenue to the light plant, therefore self-preservation entered into the idea.

The City of Conway was making a net profit on its power plant of more than $20,000 annually. Why not turn that profit into a fund to endow the colleges?

A Popular Move

The suggestion was popular.

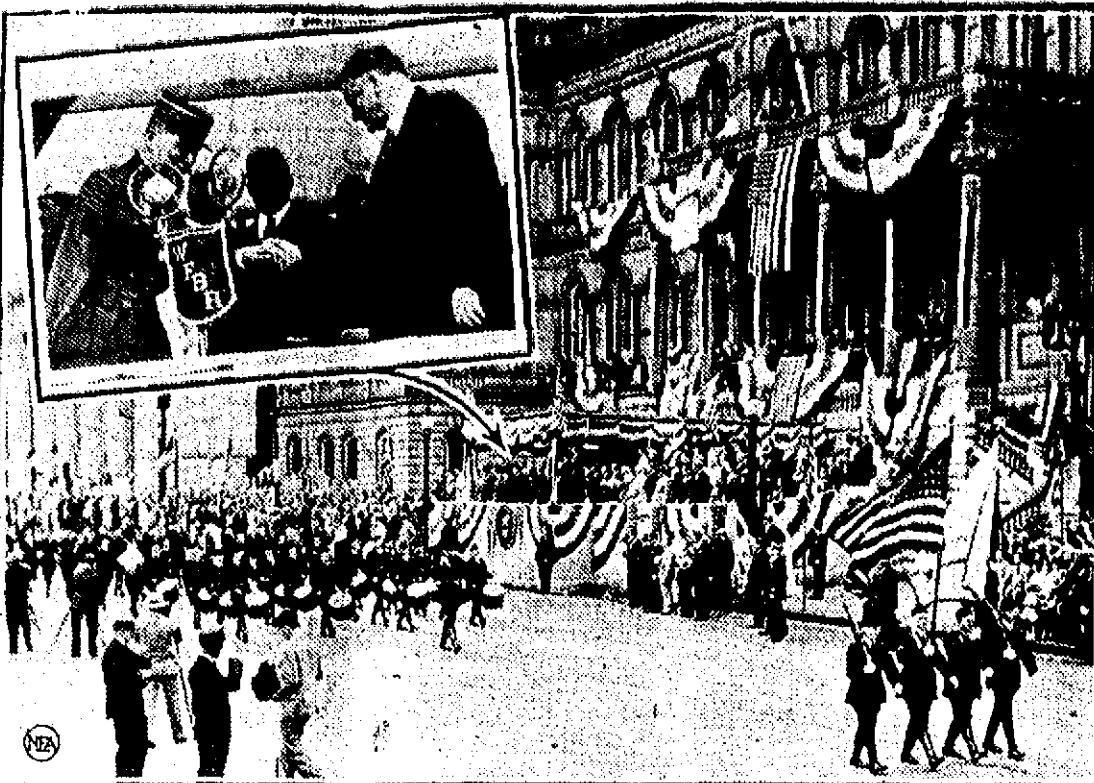

The committee abandoned all other plans under consideration and recommended that a board of commissioners be formed for the purpose of leasing the light plant from the city for a period of 20 years, the commissioners to pay the city the sum of $4,800 annually as rent on the plant, maintain all street lights and property of the light plant during the 20 years period and furnish all electricity necessary for city use.

The remainder of the revenue each year would be turned into a fund to be used to retire a bond issue, the proceeds which would meet the situation with reference to the educational institutions.

Arrangements for selling the bonds were made and the city council passed an ordinance accepting the lease proposition made by the committee. Apparently all residents of the city were agreed on the proposition but the state constitution provides that all municipal ordinances affecting franchises must be subject to referendum to the voters of the municipality and cannot become effective until the expiration of 90 days following enactment. So much delay would have seriously interfered with the movement, so friends of the idea got busy immediately after the ordinance was passed, petitioned a referendum and had the election set for an early date.

While the proposition was pending, Gov. Harvey Parnell relieved Conway of the situation at the state teachers college by issuing a proclamation authorizing the college board of trustees to incur indebtedness sufficient to build the Gouraud, military governor of Paris, who is in the United States as a guest of the m in which they witnessed the parade of the famed division. Arrow points to the reviewing stand from fighting force.

It has been decided to distribute the $200,000 proceeds of the bond sale as follows: Hendrix College will receive $150,000; Central College will receive between $50,000 and $40,000 for the purpose of paying present indebtedness; the remainder of the money will go to the Conway public school system, and to the Catholic parochial school.

The decision to attend financial aid to the public and parochial schools resulted from a belief that a city which boasts three colleges ought to offer the very best to be had in the way of primary and intermediate educational advantages. Residents of Conway have at all times been proud of their municipal light plant, but now, that it has saved their city from ruin, they are more enthusiastic than ever.

Aviation Will Be Festival Feature

Landing Field Being Put In Shape for Heavy Duty.

The aviation committee of the Hope Chamber of Commerce met yesterday afternoon and discussed plans for making aviation a feature of the program for the fourth annual Watermelon Festival. It was decided to invite all the aviators in the state to attend and participate in the program. A number of aviators from outside the state will also be invited. If the plans of the committee are carried out, festival visitors will have an opportunity to witness all classes of flying known to aviation.

The landing field will be put in first class condition, marked according to standard requirements and a new wind cone will be provided for the guidance of the aviators. The aviation committee is still working on plans for a flying school at Hope and expects to push the matter immediately following the Watermelon Festival.
